Scottish Woodlands' roots reach back to a forest owner's cooperative which was first incorporated as a commercial company in 1967. For the last three decades, the Company has been predominantly employee-owned.

Growing a Sustainable Future

The Company operates throughout the UK from a network of 18 offices located in the main UK timber growing areas. We provide a comprehensive range of services to landowners in the fields of new woodland creation, forest management, timber harvesting and marketing, as well as providing forestry investment guidance. Alongside this, we offer specialist contract work in forestry, utilities and landscaping sectors, undertaking planting, fencing, vegetation clearance, minor civils and groundwork as well as ground maintenance.

The Company regularly plants more than 25% of private sector new woodland creation in the UK, to create new woodlands and a future timber resource. We manage existing woodlands across the full range of property sizes and market more than a million tonnes of timber annually on behalf of clients. We offer a completely independent approach to timber marketing and regularly supply in excess of 300 industrial wood using customers within the UK and abroad. This market influence provides us with the capability to obtain the strongest possible prices for our clients' timber harvest.

The Scottish Woodlands team seeks to develop business solutions which make the most of the forest management and harvesting opportunities in today's market. Our trained and experienced staff are renowned for developing solutions that meet client objectives, whether that's for timber production, natural flood management, carbon sequestration, shelter for livestock, habitat and biodiversity improvement or to assist clients with specialised projects on railways, powerlines, with vegetation management, fencing or landscaping.

Safety is our number one priority across all of the operational business streams. We have invested in training of all operational staff so they not only understand their personal responsibilities, but can engage skilled, competent contractors, and deliver best-practice solutions using safe systems of work.

All our work is underpinned by industry leading technical services which can be provided independently, including forest certification, digital mapping and woodland insurance.
